DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF WASHINGTON COUNTY

VOLUME I. SPRINGFIELD, KY., WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 27, 1905. NUMBER 44

LABOR PAPER

Says McChord Will Receive Undivided Support

Of the Laboring Classes of Kentucky If He Announces For Governor.

A FRIEND OF ORGANIZED LABOR.

The New Era, the organ of organized labor for Kentucky, reproduces the following editorial from The Sun with comments:

While there is a great deal of speculation on the part of politicians and newspapers throughout the State as to the probable candidacy of the Hon. C. C. McChord for Governor, there is no speculation as to what he is actually doing in regard to the discharge of his duties as Chairman of the Kentucky Railroad Commission. His fidelity to the duties of his office, and the many thousands of dollars being saved to the shippers of Kentucky by the lowering of extortionate freight rates, will be appreciated by the people of the State at the proper time; and, while he has not yet announced his candidacy for any office, and while neither politics nor the so-called factional fights seem to be bothering him, and in which he seems to be taking no hand, we believe that, when he does become a candidate, the people of Kentucky will show their appreciation by electing him to any office to which he may aspire.—Sun.

To emphasize the above, the New Era desires to say that the Hon. C. C. McChord is the friend of organized labor. The mine workers of the State especially indorse him for his loyalty to them in the last General Assembly; for his untiring efforts in their behalf for measures they desired to become laws. Mr. McChord's labor record is such that ought to commend him to all branches of industry. He is in reality a friend of the common people; he enjoys distinctive popularity in this respect, for his every act in public life has endeared him to the people of Kentucky as worthy of their fullest confidence. One thing is certain, and that is, should he announce himself for office, he will get the support of the people who elect men to positions of trust.

In referring to the editorial printed above the Lyon County Times says:

The above appeared in The Springfield Sun, Mr. McChord's home paper, last week, and while the item is complimentary, it is truthful throughout. Since his first election to the position he now fills so well, Mr. McChord has been a favorite among the people. He has been often mentioned in connection with the next gubernatorial contest by many West Kentucky Democrats who have watched his coarse in public office with admiration.

MT. ZION.

Protracted meeting will begin here Tuesday, October 10. Rev. Maxwell will be assisted by Rev. O'Rear. The quarterly conference will be held the second Sunday and Monday in October.

We Need a County Map.

An accurate map of Washington county is very much in need just at this time. Besides being of almost indispensable use to the traveling public, it would probably enable us to have established more rural free delivery routes. The map which we now have of the county is very inaccurate, it having been made in 1877, therefore "much of the county is not accounted for." The Postoffice Department at Washington demands of all counties undertaking the establishment of a complete rural mail service a map which is accurate in every detail.

If some enterprising citizen will take this matter up and have a map of the county made we believe that he would be well paid for his work. The cost of making the map is not very great, and the printing would be a small item. It seems to us there would be considerable demand for an up-to-date map of Washington county. They could be easily sold at $1 each, and we believe it would be little trouble to dispose of 1,000 in just a little while. The maps, after the county had been thoroughly canvassed, could be placed in the stores, and for a number of years, at least, would be a staple article. The map of the county made in '77 was sold at $10.

Registration Day.

Next Tuesday is registration day. Register and vote in November.

CARDWELL.

Mr. Robert Noel and Miss Hester Newby spent Saturday and Sunday at Kirkwood, the guests of Miss Nancy Royalty.

Mr. Lee Kenny and family, of Indiana, are here for a few days' visit.

Mrs. W. G. Simms visited at M. A. Perkins', at Battle, Sunday.

Mr. Joe Carey left for Arthur, Ill., last week.

Mary A. Perkins visited at S. H. Gardner's last week.

Mr. E. T. Perkins and family spent Sunday with his mother at Battle.

Mr. Robert Masters and family, of Armington, Ill., and Mrs. Edgar Freeman, are on an extended visit to their parents near here.

Mr. and Mrs. Steve Grant, of Pearson, Ill., are here on a two-weeks' visit to friends.

Mr. J. T. Brown was here Saturday on business.

Several from here were in Springfield last Monday with their mules.

You often read of fish and snake stories, but I want to tell you a true bee story. On the farm of N. B. Royalty there is a swarm of bees that has been there all the season—in fact, we do not know how long. However, the bees settled on the second rail from the top and gradually worked downward until they now occupy five rails, and from the bulk of honey there—with no protection but the ordinary rail fence—I should judge there was 100 pounds.

A horse belonging to Charley Pinkston broke its leg and had to be killed. Loss, $125.

Stock Sales

Turner Colvin sold to Perkins & Brown a black horse for $35.

N. B. Royalty sold to E. G. Holliday eight steers at 4 cents, with $1 off on the head, and Mr. Holliday resold same to Clel Coleman at 4 cents, with $1 on the head.

R. L. Kyler sold to Elster Graham six hogs at 4½ cents.

E. G. Holliday sold to Walter Hays one heifer at 3 cents.

Mr. Claude Britton last week lost a weanling mule which he had sold to W. L. Graham for $80.

HARDESTY.

Tobacco growers in this vicinity have about finished cutting the crop.

Mr. Ernest Goatley and Miss Della Virgin spent Saturday and Sunday with the Misses Gray.

Messrs. Will Shirley and Joel Anderson were in this vicinity Saturday.

Mr. W. S. Goodlitt was in Anderson county last week.

Mrs. S. P. Chesser visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Seay, at Valley Hill, Sunday.

Dr. and Mrs. Williams, of Arshbrook, were here Sunday.

Mr. Albert Washburn visited near Litsey Sunday.

Miss Ollie Parish spent Thursday with Miss Texie Bartow.

Misses Eva and Gracie and Master Roy D. Sutherland spent Saturday night with the family of Mr. J. H. Gray.

MEETS DEATH

In a Most Horrible Manner.

Mangled Body of Thomas Mattingly Found On Railroad Track Tuesday Morning.

KILLED BY TRAIN LAST MONDAY.

Thos. Mattingly, a young man who resided in the Booker neighborhood, of the county, was run over and killed by the evening train of Monday. The accident occurred about eight miles out of Springfield. The unfortunate young man had spent the day in Springfield, and late in the afternoon left town in company with Geo. Goatly, who resides in the same neighborhood, but when near the railroad, Goatly left Mattingly, as his, Goatly's, road was in another direction. This was the last time Mattingly was seen alive. It will never be known just how the accident occurred, but it is generally believed that the unfortunate man sat down upon the track and went to sleep.

The body was not found until the next morning—not until the the morning train had again passed over part of it. About twenty feet from where the body was found a pool of blood was first discovered, and upon further investigation the mangled remains were found lying between two ties. Both legs had been severed and the body was otherwise horribly mangled.

Mr. Mattingly was a son of Charles Mattingly, and was liked by all who knew him. He was an energetic, hard-working young man, and his tragic death will be mourned by many friends. Funeral services were conducted this morning at New Hope, by the Rev. Williams, of the Baptist Church here.

JENSONTON.

News is scarce, but I will try and write a few items.

The protracted meeting which has been in progress at Beech Grove church closed Wednesday night. The meeting, which was conducted by Rev. E. E. Summers, resulted in twenty-six additions to the church.

Mr. W. T. Phillips was here Friday on business.

Miss Pattie Campbell, of Springfield, is spending the week with her aunt, Mrs. J. C. Campbell, of this place, who has been quite ill of typhoid fever, but is now improving.

Mrs. Hughes Butler is very low of typhoid fever at present.

Miss Josie Coyle is spending the week with her sister, Mrs. Obe Pope.

Mrs. John Milburn met with a serious accident one day last week. While coming down the stairs at her home she tripped and fell, spraining her ankle very badly.

Miss Ada Arnold spent Saturday and Sunday with her parents here.

Mr. Hooker Key spent Thursday night with relatives here.

C. W. Green was in Springfield Saturday on business.

Mr. William Lay has completed the addition to his residence.

Several of our citizens attended court at Springfield Monday.

PLEASANT HILL.

The farmers of this community are about through cutting tobacco, and are now busy cutting corn. The threshing machine is now in our midst, but it is later this season than it has been for many a year.

Revs. Young and Sims are conducting a series of meetings at Antioch. We wish them much success.

G. W. Shirley sold a herd of cattle to H. H. Graham for $208.

Misses Clara Shepherd and Dora Crouch visited at the home of G. W. Shirley Friday and Saturday.

A large crowd attended the party here Friday night, which was given in honor of Miss Shepherd.

Mr. and Mrs. Silas Burkhead have returned from an extended visit to relatives in Indiana.

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Shirley were guests at the home of William Keeling Sunday.

Lecture Course.

Prof. George Colvin and Mr. Theo. Campbell have about perfected arrangements to give the people of Springfield a lecture course this fall and winter. The talent which they will bring to Springfield will be of the very best, and the entertainments and lectures should be largely attended. There is nothing better for a town than a lecture course. The opera house should fill to overflowing when a good lecture is to be delivered. Lectures are instructive and uplifting, and the people should attend them.

To Men Only.

Joe Munday, formerly actor and playwright, will lecture to men only in the Court House to-night. No one under sixteen anmitted. Admission free.

News Briefs.

Last Thursday afternoon Miss Florence Lillard VanArsdale and Mr. James Burnside Anderson were married in the Baptist church at Harrodsburg.

Doc Davis and Henry Coleman, colored, of Harrodsburg, engaged in a shooting match. Coleman was "hit hard" twice, but is not dangerously hurt.

Dr. James Harrison Moore, one of Harrodsburg's wealthiest and most loved citizens, died at his home in that city last week.

The Nelson County Association of Baptists, composed of twenty-one churches, with a membership of over 3,300, met with Cox's Creek Baptist church on September 13 at 10:30 a. m.

WILLISBURG.

The farmers are very near through housing their tobacco, and are preparing to sow wheat.

Many young people from this place attended the party given at the home of George Shirley, at Pleasant Hill, on last Friday night. All report a nice time.

Mrs. Will. Sims spent last Friday with Mrs. M. A. Shirley.

Miss Viola Vice has returned home from a short stay with Miss Katie Scott.

Merritt Hungate and family spent last Thursday with his daughter, Mrs. Robert Sims.

George Prather and family spent Sunday with W. S. Brawley.

Miss Elizabeth Shirley has returned home from a few days' stay with her sisters at Litsey.

Miss Myrtle Sutherland visited Mrs. Dudley Sutherland a few days last week.

Mrs. H. H. Tatum, who has been visiting her mother, Mrs. M. A. Shirley, at this place, has returned home.

Mrs. J. K. Wells spent last Sunday at Birchwood.

Miss Eada Gibson spent last Saturday with her aunt, Mrs. Martha Grider.

Mrs. E. E. Brown has returned home from Lexington, where she has been visiting relatives and friends.

John Perkins and family visited relatives near Tatham Springs last Saturday.

Miss Lela Goodlett attended church here last Sunday morning.

Mrs. Richard Pinkston spent last Wednesday with her father, John Grider.

Miss Ethel Rodgers visited at the home of T. J. Miller last week.

W. S. Brawley and family will leave next Friday for Cincinnati, where they will visit relatives and friends.

Ben. McIlvoy and family spent last Sunday with his parents here.

Many from here attended court at Springfield Monday.

It was announced here last Sunday that the dedication of the new Christian church at Mackville had been postponed, but we have been authorized to announce that this was a mistake, and that the dedicatory services will be held next Sunday, conducted by Rev. Buckner, of Harrodsburg. All are invited.

Some person poisoned a pet dog belonging to Miss Blanche Shirley. This was evidently the work of a coward, who, having some grudge against the owner, took advantage of the dumb brute in order to get revenge.

Wanted—Hides.

I want to buy hides of all kinds. Remember, I AM PAYING THE HIGHEST MARKET PRICES. M. H. JONES.

TOBACCO GROWERS

Meet At Court House And Hear Plans

For Organization of Burley Growers' Company.—An Enthusiastic Meeting.

MEETING OF DARK GROWERS.

An enthusiastic meeting of the burley tobacco growers was held at the court house here Monday afternoon. The court house was well filled, and the address of Hon. W. C. McChord was attentively listened to and roundly applauded. Mr. McChord explained in detail another plan which is now on foot, and which, it is believed, will be successfully consummated. He is now in Lexington attending a meeting of the directors of the Burley Growers' Company, and at this meeting it is expected that something of a definite nature will be decided upon.

At the meeting here Monday afternoon the growers were asked to subscribe for stock in the company, and to pay ten per cent. of their stock in cash, and subscription papers were placed in the hands of secretaries of the meeting. The farmers did not subscribe as liberally as was expected, but this was due to the unsettled condition of matters, rather than to a lack of interest on their part.

In order to give the capitalists who are to finance the Burley Company an approximate number of pounds of tobacco produced in Kentucky in one season, it is necessary to put men in the field to ascertain of the farmers the number of acres they have in tobacco this season. On next Saturday the growers of Washington county are requested to meet at some place in their voting precinct and select two men for this purpose. It is suggested that as many as a half dozen growers in each district will be sufficient to attend to this matter. They should select the men to take the acreage and have them start upon the work at once, as these reports must be in the hands of the executive committee in ten days. The men who do this work will receive liberal compensation for their services.

The first annual meeting of the Dark Tobacco Protective Association of Kentucky and Tennessee, held at Guthrie, Ky., last Saturday, was a success in every way. There was fully 20,000 planters and their families in attendance. Two hundred and ten carcasses and 3,000 loaves of bread were dispensed to the crowd, besides each individual bringing a basket. Seven brass bands discoursed music, and good cheer reigned throughout the day.

Old men, who had grown feeble in the black patch, were conveyed to the fair grounds in carriages and became young again as they mingled with the younger men, who are to continue their brave fight against the trust.

LONG RUN.

Mr. G. H. Christerson and family spent Sunday with the family of Mr. James Vest.

Mr. and Mrs. Sie Harmon last Sunday visited Mr. Marcus Cocanougher, who is sick with typhoid fever.

The singing held at Mrs. Lucinda Blacketus' Sunday evening was quite enjoyable to all.

Mrs. Mattie Wallace, of Springfield, and Miss Susie Cooley, of Stanford, were guests of Mrs. Paralee Cocanougher Thursday.

Mr. John Harmon and father were in Cincinnati Sunday.

Miss Mattie Begley spent Saturday and Sunday with the family of Mr. Richard Best.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Robinson, Joe Robinson and Miss Ora Goode spent Sunday at Mr. Billy Goode's.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Goode visited their daughter, Mrs. Fannie Whayne, near Perryville, Saturday and Sunday.

Our farmers will get through cutting tobacco this week. We have a better crop than we have had for years.

Mr. Tarrie Gibson and Miss Lena Martin were married at Perryville Sunday.

Old Turkeys Wanted.

Get rid of your old turkeys now. I will pay 10 cents a pound for them this week. M. H. JONES.

Will Quit Business.

Mr. S. B. Thompson, the popular proprietor of the Walton Hotel, informs The Sun that he will give up the hotel here January 1, and that he will likely move to another town, though he has not yet decided where he will locate. Mr. and Mrs. Thompson have given the public an excellent hotel, and the patrons will be sorry to learn that they have decided to seek a new location. There are few more popular proprietors in Kentucky than Mr. Thompson, and there are none who are more generally liked by commercial travelers. Always accommodating and endeavoring to make their guests comfortable and pleasant, Mr. Thompson and his excellent wife will be greatly missed, not alone by the traveling public, but by the citizens of Springfield.

Notice.

All parties knowing themselves indebted to Sidney Green, deceased, either by note or account, will please call and settle same at once. All parties having claims against said Sidney Green will present them, properly proven, to us on or before the 1st day of November, 1905. C. A. GREEN AND J. C. MCELROY,

SYCAMORE VALLEY.

Mesdames Emma Coulter and Nan Scott attended church at Mackville Sunday.

Miss Myrtle Sutherland, of Willisburg, was the pleasant guest of Mrs. J. D. Sutherland from Friday until Sunday.

Mr. James Shields sold to Mr. John Perkins five calves at $12 each, and Mr. J. D. Sutherland sold to Mr. Perkins three hogs at 6 cents per pound.

Several from the Valley attended church at Willisburg Sunday. Rev. Young delivered quite an interesting sermon, and we hope to hear him again.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. and Miss Myrtle Sutherland were pleasantly entertained Saturday night by the Misses Armstrong. Miss Myrtle is a good organist.

Mr. Ormsby Shewmaker attended the party at Mr. Oscar Shirley's Friday night and reports an enjoyable time.

Several from the Valley antended the sale of Mr. F. M. Shewmaker Thursday. There was a large crowd present and things sold well.

Rev. C. C. Allen is expected to begin a series of meetings at the Hillsboro church the first of October. Rev. Allen is an able divine, and we hope his congregations will be large.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Sutherland spent Sunday at Willisburg with the family of J. W. Sutherland.

Last Wednesday our blacksmith cut eight shocks of corn and put on twelve horseshoes, and went to Thompsonville in the afternoon.

Corn cutting, sorghum making and seeding rye and wheat are the chief occupations of our farmers just now.

Miss Hattie Sutherland spent Sunday at Willisburg.

Eld. W. Ezra Sutherland returned home this week from Polkville, Warren county, Ky., where he closed a good meeting, with a large number of additions. Money was raised to repair the house and pay off all indebtedness. He will leave Friday for Green county to hold a series of meetings at Gilliead church, also at Thurlow, same county.

TEXAS.

Dr. Crosby and wife have returned to their home in Shelbyville, after a visit to their son, Dr. Crosby, here.

Several from here attended the teachers' association meeting at Pleasant Run last Saturday. All report an enjoyable time.

Mr. and Mrs. John Peterson have returned from a pleasant trip to Louisville.

P. C. W. Peterson went to Brumfield yesterday.

Mr. Moss, of Springfield, and Jacob Peterson, of this place, went to Bradfordsville Saturday on business.

Mrs. Minor Ransdale, of Harrodsburg, spent last week with her father, Rev. J. W. Campbell.

Miss Nellie Peterson, who has been confined to her room for several weeks with scrofula, is now improving.

On September 23 Mrs. Sue McGinnis Thompson, aged twenty-three, died of consumption. Mrs. Thompson had been a sufferer for almost a year. She leaves a husband, one child and a host of friends to mourn her death. The funeral took place Monday morning at 11 o'clock, at Bethlehem, Rev. Purdom officiating.

Battle With Snake.

Huge Reptile Escapes From Den at Mid-Night And Gets On the War-Path.

THE IMMENSE PYTHON WOUND ITSELF ABOUT VEHLE'S BODY.

Chicago.—Amid a discordant chorus of screeching monkeys, shrieking parrots, frightened canaries, squealing guinea pigs and chattering song birds, in the semi-darkness of a single light at midnight in the bird store of E. C. Vehle, on State street, the proprietor and Cy De Vry, animal keeper at Lincoln park, battled three-quarters of an hour with two giant pythons, in momentary danger of being crushed to death by the ferocious reptiles.

It was as weird a fight as ever took place in Chicago and ended fortunately for the two men, who succeeded in getting the snakes back into their den and found themselves uninjured. Then it was discovered that the larger of the two pythons had swallowed two valuable ringtail monkeys and had killed 17 Java sparrows.

The two reptiles, one 19 feet long and the other 16 feet in length, and each as large of girth as a stovepipe, were received from the Philadelphia house of the Vehle concern early in the week. They were part of a recent importation of reptiles from India.

The snakes were confined in a strong box, five feet square and two feet high, covered with a wire netting. When the store was closed at night the lid was left open so that the reptiles could get air, the only bar to their getting out being the net, the frame of which could easily be displaced.

Mr. Vehle and his wife went to a theater and after the performance went past the store to see whether everything was all right, for in the place there are nearly 4,000 birds and other small animals. As Mr. Vehle and his wife neared the store they heard a terrific commotion, in which every one of the 4,000 little tenants of the cages seemed to be taking part.

Mr. Vehle glanced through the window and in the dim light could see two great squirming forms threshing and wriggling here and there across the floor. A veritable inferno it was, with thousands of voices sounding terror and panic. Mr. Vehle, realizing that the big snakes had escaped, quickly unlocked the door, telling his wife to wait outside. When he entered the smaller of the pythons was just making for a cage of monkeys that had been knocked off a balcony, and he grasped the reptile.

With a quick movement the snake tried to form a coil around his legs, but he prevented it by jumping to one side, not loosing his hold on the snake's neck. Dragging and lifting, the python the while squirming and seeking to get its huge form around him, Vehle fought toward the box, the net cover of which lay on the floor.

Mrs. Vehle outside could see the battle, and in fear watched the struggle of her husband. He shouted to her to telephone to Cy De Vry at Lincoln park to come down immediately, and she ran to a phone near by.

Meanwhile Mr. Vehle was struggling with the python, only a few feet away from its den. A great cage of Java birds that had been knocked off a high shelf by the snakes lay on the floor, and a cage of ringtail monkeys also lay near by, one side of it broken open and the two animals missing. The screeching and cries of the birds and monkeys continued, and above the sound of other voices could be heard the deeper and harsher cries of a pair of baboons.

While Vehle fought with the smaller snake the other did not attack him, but continued swirling and squirming about the room, knocking cages down and seeking to break into them. It was a little after midnight when Vehle succeeded in getting the smaller snake into the den and clasping the cover down.

The big python, still at liberty, had by this time ceased its efforts to get at the birds and monkeys and lay quietly on the floor. Presently Cy De Vry arrived, and the two attempted to lift the big reptile into the den. Then the real battle commenced.

The big python weighs 170 pounds. To lift the dead weight, even if he complacently lay still, would be no easy task, but the instant De Vry grasped him, like a flash, the snake wound his form in two coils around Vehle's body, and De Vry, seeing the danger, grasped the snake's head in both hands and ran around Vehle twice, unwinding the coil before the snake could get sufficient purchase to crush Vehle.

De Vry and Vehle, each seeking to get hold of the cold, slimy form, fought desperately for nearly three-quarters of an hour, the monkeys, the parrots, canaries, love birds, rabbits and other animals not once stopping their commotion and cries.

The confusion only added to the difficulty. Nearly exhausted, the two men were about to give up the struggle and summon more help when Vehle told De Vry he could club the snake into submission. De Vry then struck the big fellow a half dozen times on the head with a black jack and the battle was won. The two lifted the big form into the den.

It was then found that the larger python had swallowed the two ringtails that had occupied the cage that lay on the floor. A bulge in his body two feet back from his head told the story of the little monkeys' fate. They had been destroyed before Mr. Vehle reached the store. The 19 Java sparrows killed were destroyed when the big python knocked their cage to the floor.

"These snakes eat only once a year," Mr. Vehle said afterwards. "They heard the birds in the store during the night, and I suppose they got suddenly hungry and started out after a meal."

SUCCESSFUL WOMAN.

She Makes Pictures For Uncle Sam, and Is Very Successful.

MISS L. BERNIE GALLAHER.

Miss L. Bernie Gallaher, the assistant photographer in the National museum at Washington, is the only woman in that branch of the government service, and her work has been singularly successful. She has been a most valuable aid to that veteran in photography, Professor Thomas W. Smillie, who for thirty-five years has been the photographer of the museum and who has photographed more eclipses probably than any other man in the country.

Miss Gallaher is a native of Washington and has been connected with the museum for the past twenty-seven years. She began as a clerk, and about fifteen years ago took up amateur photography as a fad. Returning from one of her vacations, she exhibited some of the pictures she had made. They came under the observation of Professor Smillie. He saw at once the merit in them and the possibilities of the artist under proper training. It was but a short time after that Miss Gallaher was transferred to the photographic department, where she is now doing work that has attracted the attention of artists as well as scientists throughout the country.

Microscopic photography is one of the branches in which Miss Gallaher has done some splendid work. This is labor unusually trying both on the eyes and the endurance of the artist.

Another of Miss Gallaher's specialties is the making of lantern slides. She has some magnificent specimens of this class of photography that have been used on the lecture platform in this country and in Europe. In the museum are many fine specimens suitable to the purposes of scientific lectures that have been utilized by the artist in this branch of her work.

In the printing and manipulation of platinum paper Miss Gallaher is an expert. This paper is used in pictures where it is desired to bring out the lights and shadows in contrast, and some of the results she has obtained on very large prints are so remarkable that they appear to be steel engravings rather than photographs.

Miss Gallaher is also a fine administrative officer. When her chief is away, as he frequently is, she is in charge of the photographic force, which is not inconsiderable.—Boston Globe.

The Colonel's Waterloo.

Col. John M. Fuller, of Honey Grove, Texas, nearly met his Waterloo, from Liver and Kidney trouble. In a recent letter he says: "I was nearly dead, of these complaints, and, although I tried my family doctor, he did me no good; so I got a 50-cent bottle of your great Electric Bitters, which cured me. I consider them the best medicine on earth, and thank God, who gave you the knowledge to make them." Sold, and guaranteed to cure Dyspepsia, Biliousness and Kidney Disease, by C. J. Haydon, druggist, at 50 cents a bottle.

More earthquake shocks were felt throughout Italy.

MOURNED AS DEAD

For Twenty-One Years Was Husband and Father.

Harrodsburg Herald: A dispatch from Lexington in yesterday's Cincinnati Post says that Samuel Snyder, who so mysteriously disappeared, has returned after an absence of twenty-one years. A short time before he vanished he married Mrs. Sue Lyen, a most estimable Harrodsburg lady. The ceremony took place at the Commercial Hotel in the presence of many well-wishers, who saw them depart on their wedding journey. Shortly after this he and Mrs. Snyder went to Louisville on a visit, and he completely disappeared. Mrs. Snyder was convinced that he had either become suddenly insane or had met with foul play, and advertised extensively for information as to his whereabouts, and sent circulars to every police department in the country. A few days after his disappearance his clothes were found on the banks of a creek in Indiana. His son, Otis Snyder, offered a large reward for the recovery of the body, but nothing more was ever heard of him until his return Monday. At the time of his disappearance he was the leading jeweler of Lexington. The mystery of his disappearance has not been cleared up by his reappearance, as his son, Otis Snyder, declined to allow him to be interviewed at this time; but he comes back a white-bearded and wrinkled man of seventy-five years of age, and would never have been recognized by his old acquaintances. It is said that an effort was made to collect the money on his life insurance policies, but that the companies refused to pay without proof of his death; and, although no one doubted that he was dead, proof could not be furnished. Mrs. Snyder died about years ago, believing she was his widow.

Strikes Hidden Rocks.

When your ship of health strikes the hidden rocks of Consumption, Pneumonia, etc., you are lost, if you don't get help from Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. J. W. McKinnon, of Talladega Springs, Ala., writes: "I had been very ill with Pneumonia, under the care of two doctors, but was getting no better, when I began to take Dr. King's New Discovery. The first dose gave relief, and one bottle cured me." Sure cure for sore throat, bronchitis, coughs and colds. Guaranteed at C. J. Haydon's drug store. Price, 50 cents and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

The Old Way.

Harrodsburg Herald: In an interview in the Frankfort Journal, Judge W. S. Pryor expresses strong reasons why we should return to the viva voce system of voting. The judge served over twenty years on the appellate bench, and says his investigation of election fraud contests proved conclusively that more frauds, by two to one, are committed under the secret ballot plan than under the viva voce plan. He says it is possible, under secret ballot, for a few men absolutely to control elections by a few neatly executed frauds, and that no way has been found to circumvent them, whereas, under the viva voce system, each voter has his name recorded, and can see that his name is properly entered. If a contest results under the viva voce system, the record shows how each man voted, thus greatly lessening the opportunity for fraud. There could, under this system, be no wholesale perversion of the public, as under the secret ballot, cast in secret and counted in secret. The advocates of the retention of the present system argue that corporations will be able to control elections by coercing their employes to vote as they dictate; but even that would not be so deplorable as to have dishonest election officers set aside the expressed will of the voters, as they can and do under the secret ballot. The question is to be voted on in the coming November election, when we hope the nefarious system will be stricken from the constitution and laws for all time to come.

Cattle Poisoned.

Kentucky Standard: Esquire S. T. Shawler, of Cox's Brook, was in town Monday and reported the death of two of his fine cattle. One was a milch cow, valued at $35, and the other was a heifer, valued at $25. Both animals were very fat and in good condition. It is supposed they were poisoned by eating buckeye.

ONLY AT NIGHT

Can These Two Connecticut Boys See; Human Owls.

Afflicted with Disease Which Puzzles Scientists, They Suffer in the Daytime, But Play Joyfully After Dark.

Derby, Conn.—Doomed to lead lives like owls is the fate of two little East Hartford boys, to whom day is night and night is day. These boys can see only in the dark or in a very dim light.

While other boys are at play in the bright sunshine they steal away into sunless corners, there to await the falling shadows that alone bring sight to their day-blind eyes. Long after youths twice their age are in bed and asleep they keep up their play with top and marbles and tin soldiers.

So spry and wide awake are they after dark that midnight finds them loath to sleep away any part of their day, and nearly always they are bundled off to bed under protest. Medical science and opthalmic skill are powerless to remedy this perversion of sight.

The boys are Hyman and Abel White, the only children of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel White of East Hartford. Hyman is nearly seven years old, and Abel is four. With both the defect of vision is congenital. Since the birth of the younger child their parents have sought the advice of the most celebrated oculists in the country, who with one accord have pronounced the cases irremediable. The sight of Mr. and Mrs. White is not defective or abnormal in any way, nor was that of the grandparents or great-grandparents of the boys.

Dr. Samuel B. St. John, of Hartford, an oculist who was consulted by Mr. White, said recently: "Nyctalopia is a medical term for being able to see only at night, but it is also used to express inability to see at night, the exact opposite for which, however, hemeralopia, is the usually accepted expression. The White children were born with the former defect, and no sure remedy therefor is known to the medical profession.

"Somewhere, back several generations, one or more ancestors of these boys was similarly affected, and now the disease, after skipping many persons, has settled in these young persons."

Albinism is due to a lack of pigment, but its distinguishing characteristics of pink eyes and white hair are not present in the White boys, whose eyes and hair are dark like those of their parents.

It is a noteworthy circumstance that Hyman Cohn, a 15-year-old boy, who lives across the street from the Whites, has an eye affection that permits him to see only in the brightest light. Cohn suffers from hemeralopia, or nightblindness. He cannot go abroad alone at night.

Startling Mortality.

Statistics show startling mortality from appendicitis and peritonitis. To prevent and cure these awful diseases, there is just one reliable remedy, Dr. King's New Life Pills. M. Flannery, of 14 Custom House Place, Chicago, says: "They have no equal for Constipation and Biliousness." 25 cents at C. J. Haydon's, druggist.

THE POWER OF THE PRESS.

[Lebanon Enterprise.]

With the progress of the world in these latter days the cloak of supremacy, in the old contest between the sword and the pen, seems decidedly to be settling toward the bailiwick of the pen.

Notwithstanding the fact that one of the bloodiest wars in history is just being brought to a close, the world is not belligerent as it formerly was. People are more engrossed in other pursuits than in warring with their fellow beings. And then the guns are so big, and the explosives are so powerful, and the projectiles are so deadly nowadays, that fighting has come to be decidedly dangerous and non-conducive to the pursuits of health and happiness; and, while we want powerful navies and great armies, it is coming to the point that we want them principally for the purpose of making "demonstrations" while our diplomats are busy dickering for the most advantageous terms of settlement of our differences with our neighbors, and so it is that the power of the sword is on the wane in these latter days.

Not so with the pen. The power exerted to-day by the army of quill-pushers through the medium of the daily press can scarcely be overestimated. Especially true is this in our own country, where the freedom of the press is unrestrained. No other influence so moulds the thought of the people in the evolution of that great agency of moral force, public opinion, and it is public opinion that shapes the destinies of men and the course of events. Public opinion makes presidents and senators and governors; precipitates war and demands peace, gives rise to great enterprises and pushes them to completion, overthrows corruption and punishes moral crime, and public opinion is today largely a creation of the daily press. And let it be said, to its honor, that the influence of the daily press is usually found on the side of moral right. Take, as an instance, the fight that is being waged on corruption and bossism in our neighboring city, Cincinnati, led by the little Cincinnati Post. Watch the outcome of that fight and you will see again exemplified the axiom that official crime and corruption can not exist in the glare. Let any set of officials—it matters not how powerful they may be, how extended may be the avenues of their influence, how well filled their coffers—once attract by corruption the light of the daily press, and their days are numbered. Through force of influence and power of money they may stem the tide for a while, but the constant exposure to the glare, as day by day the chain of evidence is forged about them by a tireless force, must eventually result in their going down under the weight of public opinion. Cox bossism must go down.—Lebanon Enterprise.

THREE JURORS CURED

Of Cholera Morbus With One Small Bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

Mr. G. W. Fowler, of Hightower, Ala., relates an experience he had while serving on a petit jury in a murder case at Edwardsville, county seat of Clebourne county, Alabama. He says: "While there I ate some fresh meat and some sause meat and it gave me cholera morbus in a very severe form. I was never more sick in my life, and sent to the drug store for a certain cholera mixture, but the druggist sent me a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy instead, saying that he he had what I sent for, but that this medicine was so much better he would rather send it to me in the fix I was in. I took one dose of it and was better in five minutes. The second dose cured me entirely. Two fellow jurors were afflicted in the same manner, and one small bottle cured the three of us." What will the President Do?

He Has It in His Power to Do Much Toward Correcting the Dishonest Methods Practiced Upon the People By Large Corporations.--He Would Be Greater In the Minds of His Countrymen If He Would Send to the Penitentiary Some of the Nation's High-Handed Thieves and Looters.

At the present time we see much in the Republican Press of our State about purity in politics. In fact, we are told that all that is good, pure and incorruptible, is embodied in, and held sacred by, the great leaders of the Republican party, both in State and National affairs.

About one year ago Judge Alton B. Parker, the Democratic candidate for President, made the charge openly that Mr. Cortelyou, who was then the chairman of the Republican national committee, had, by virtue of the official position he had held at the hands of the Republican administration, been put in a position to and was receiving from large corporations in the United States vast sums of money to carry on the campaign of corruption that was being made by the Republican party. Mr. Roosevelt, who was then President of the United States, and who was a candidate for re-election, denounced the statements made by Mr. Parker in such a vigorous manner, and in such a forceful manner, that it carried with it conviction to the minds of many, and made for him thousands of votes throughout the United States, because many people believed that Mr. Parker was mistaken as to the facts, and many people, irrespective of party affiliation, have since that time looked upon Mr. Roosevelt as the arch enemy of the corruptionists; but this opinion in the main has had for its basis what the President has SAID rather than what he has DONE. The time has now arrived for him to take action. If President Roosevelt was sincere in his vigorous denial of the statements made by Judge Parker, then the candid admission made by Mr. Perkins, vice president of the New York Life Insurance Company, that the officers of that company had contributed, largely of the policyholders' money, to his election in 1900 and 1904, must have been a great shock to him; and if the President was sincere in his denials at that time, and if he is as honest as he would have the people of the United States believe him to be, he will see to it at once that Mr. Cortelyou, the late chairman of the committee that received the stolen goods, will be at once dismissed from the official household of the President, and the cabinet position which Mr. Cortelyou now holds will be at once filled by another; and if the President is the believer in fair play and honesty in public office, he will also at once see to it that another cabinet official, Secretary Wilson, is decapitated because of the manipulation of statistics in his department that caused a loss of millions of dollars to the cotton growers and mule raisers of the United States. It will not do for the President to say that Mr. Cortelyou did not know whence came the money received from the Life Insurance Companies, nor will it do for him to say that Secretary Wilson did not know that the statistics gathered for the people and paid for with their money were being so manipulated as to place millions into the pockets of speculators at the expense of the producer, for it is his duty to know it, and, if he was not a party to it, he has exercised his official duties in such a way as to show him utterly incompetent, and in either event—one of which is bound to be true—he should be no longer retained by the President at the expense of the taxpayers of the United States.

The admission made by Vice President George W. Perkins, of the New York Life Insurance Company, before the legislative investigating committee, shows that the National Republican Committee knew that during the years of 1896, 1900 and 1904, the New York Life Insurance Company had, through its officers, put its hand into the pockets of the policyholders and taken therefrom over $150,000 and donated it to the National Campaign Committee. This charge is now known to the world, and we are of the opinion that every charge made by Mr. Parker as to this corruption fund is absolutely true. Ought not these offenders be punished? We think so. Ought not laws be enacted and enforced to prevent such things re-occurring? We think so. These laws must come from the legislatures of the eastern states, and from the National Government, both of which are dominated and controlled by the Republican party; and these prosecutions must be conducted by the courts of the eastern states and the National Government, practically all of whom are republicans. Can we hope for relief from the source from which it must come? We think not. The old adage that "A friend in need is a friend indeed" is as true to-do as it ever was, and we can not expect to receive a vigorous prosecution of the thief at the hands of the recipient of the stolen goods; nor are we credulous enough to believe that a man with the mental capacity that our President has, and with the wonderful determination that he has of knowing everything that concerns him, can succeed as a candidate in two presidential elections without knowing or even having an intimation of the vast corruption funds that were used in his behalf. Nor can we believe that these high officials of the great corporations of this country, who are men of great business sagacity, would be so bold as to put their hands into the pockets of the policyholders and unlawfully take therefrom money, unless they had the assurance that their crime would go unpunished, and that in turn they would in some way be rewarded. Thefts of the peoples' money by the officers of corporations have become so common that these men, who should be required to fill a felon's cell, now openly try to justify their action.

Mr. Perkins, the vice president of the New York Life Insurance Company, claims that the success of the Democratic party would mean a depreciation in the securities of the life insurance company, and for this reason, as a matter of business, the money was taken from the policyholders and transferred to the National Republican Committee. Let us see, if carried out to its logical conclusion, where this would lead us. If the officers of a life insurance company have a right to use the money of its policyholders, or if the officers of any corporation have a right to use the money of its stockholders to prevent the election of a man, when they think that his election will depreciate its property, then the officials of any city or of any county in the state, or the officials of any state in the Union, or the officials of the National Government, as a matter of business to the citizens, would have a right to place their hands into the treasury and draw therefrom a sufficient amount to prevent the election of any man, or set of men, whose election they, in their minds, had determined would bring about a depreciation in values of property. We do not believe that the great masses of the people are ready to accept any such theory for the government of either a corporation or a city, or a state or union, but the present policy of the Republican party has a tendency to rapidly lead us to accept such a conclusion.

There is a widespread feeling among the citizens of the United States to the effect that more rottenness exists today in the various departments of the National Government than ever existed before in the history of our country, and we are not prepared to say that this opinion is groundless or without foundation, for there is no department at Washington City that is willing to be investigated except by its friends.

The Republican party, through its national committee, accepted the money of the New York Life Insurance Company in three consecutive national campaigns, knowing that the officers of the company had no right to make such a contribution. We say that they knew this because we know that the men in charge of the Republican national campaign were men of more than ordinary intelligence, and they were bound to know that it was wrong to steal. Our law makes but little distinction between the man that steals and the man that accepts the stolen goods, knowing them to be such; and, notwithstanding these startling disclosures, we are forced to say that we have in vain listened for one word of disapproval to come from a Republican statesman or a Republican press.

It is a notorious fact that the last three Republican national campaigns have been conducted and won by the use of gigantic sums of money collected from the great corporations of the United States, and it is likewise known that the men at the head of these giant corporations are never willing to part with a dollar that they are not lawfully bound to pay unless they can see where they will be materially benefited. Now, the question addresses itself to every serious-minded citizen of this Government. what did the Republican party have to offer in return for the money unlawfully taken and unlawfully accepted? Was it immunity from punishment for unjust and discriminating legislation? If not, we call upon each individual citizen to answer the question for himself, regardless of his politics.

Mr. Roosevelt, in many respects, is a remarkable man, and for various reasons has been much admired by the American citizen. It is true that the President has received much deserved praise from the nations of the earth for the conspicuous part that he played and the great effort made by him in bringing about peace between Russia and Japan, but this will not satisfy the American people. We want to see the great trusts and combines controlled. We much prefer to see convictions of the violators of the law, rather than hear so much thunder about threatened and intended prosecutions. We prefer to see adequate laws and just laws enacted to protect the people from the injustices done them by the great railroad corporations of the United States, rather than hear so much talk about proposed legislation. We prefer to see the political debaucher and high-class thief, generally known as an embezzler, wear the garb of a felon, rather than to hear so much about civil liberty, civic rights and purity in public life. The time has come for the President to act. The promised extra session of Congress for needed legislation has not been called, and the loud talk of but a few months ago of placing laws upon the statute books to control the great corporations has faded to a low whisper, and we are now told that the responsibility for such legislation must rest with the United States Senate; but what can we expect from that body, a majority of whose members are multi-millionaires, with vast holdings in practically every interest about which they will be called upon to legislate? The large life insurance companies of the United States are gathering in each year untold millions from the people, and have put out vast sums of this money for campaign purposes, and to United States Senators employed as attorneys, and who never earned a dollar that they received from the company—yes, more than this, it has been recently discovered that large sums of money have been paid for the services of an attorney, which were services to be rendered long after his death.

A department of the Government was created by Congress for the purpose of inquiring into the inner workings of the great corporations of this country, and it was given full power to make a thorough investigation, but unfortunately the information received was to be communicated to the President only, and only such acts as he, in his judgment, might deem necessary for the public's good can be brought to light. We say this provision of the law is unfortunate, because it makes it possible for the President, if in possession of the knowledge that these corporations had unlawfully appropriated the funds of the stockholders, to withhold such information. Would the President ever think that the country ought to know that the New York Life Insurance Company or any other corporation had taken vast sums of money wrongfully for the unlawful purpose of buying his election, and doesn't such law render it practically impossible to have a change in administration so long as enough voters can be purchased to carry the election?

The Republican party in the United States have for more than eight years had control of the Government in all of its departments, and during all these years it has had it within its power to enforce the laws regulating the abuses of which we complain; or if, they contend, the laws are inadequate, then they have had it within their power to enact such laws that will enable them to correct these abuses. The Republicans have it within their power now to enact such laws, and if the President, in his message to Congress, demands the enactment of such laws, and if he insists upon its being done, we hardly believe that Congress will refuse to give the much needed relief; but, if it does refuse to do so, the long-suffering people will rise in their might and sweep from power this party that is fostering these institutions which are sapping the life out of the American citizen.

Race Fight.

Pittsburg, Penn., September 21.—All of the reserves at the South Side Police Station were called out this afternoon to quell a race riot which was started by children who attend the Shakespeare School, in the mill district. Before they succeeded in restoring order, ten negro children were so badly used up by the white boys of the school that they had to be sent to their homes. The police made no arrests, but, after restoring order, took the names of the white boys, so that they can be summoned later.

The riot was the, culmination of trouble which has been brewing since the opening of school, September 1. An unusually large number of negro pupils applied for admission to the schools this fall. The were scattered around among the white pupils indiscriminately, some of them being placed in the same seats with white boys and girls. In several instances the white pupils objected, and asked that they be given separate seats from the negroes, but the teachers refused to discriminate. As a result, several of the white pupils left the school, and were backed up by their parents.

OF RESIDENCE OF

Sidney Green, Dec'd.

Saturday, October 28, 1905.

We will, on the above date, at 2 o'clock, p. m., offer for sale to the highest bidder, the beautiful new 10-room residence, located on the south side of east Main street, in the town of Springfield, Ky. This is one of the most desirable homes in Springfield, being new and up-to-date in every respect, Mr. Green had it built under his own supervision, and using nothing but the very best material that money could buy. This house has bath rooms both on first and second floors, electric lights all over the house, a splendid cellar, large front and back porches, 6 large closets and china cabinet, stable, carriage house, smoke house, coal house, and in fact everything necessary for comfort and convenience. Enclosed with new iron fence, has concrete walk in front and around house, yard nicely set in bluegrass, and nice thrifty shade trees planted and growing. This is a beautiful location, near graded school and a place that is complete in every respect. At the same we will offer for sale the lot adjoining this property, fronting on Main street 60 feet and running back about 225 feet to the branch. We will also sell a lot of household furniture. Sale will take place at the house. Terms made known day of sale. For further information call on or address

STARTLING DISCLOSURES.

Lebanon Enterprise: Was the Presidency in 1896 and 1900 bought or stolen from Bryan? From disclosures before the Armstrong Committee of the New York Legislature, it may easily be deduced that both bribery and theft were freely employed by the business end of the Republican party to accomplish his defeat. When such measures, employed solely for the purpose of defeating the will of the majority, receive the warm applause of men, known over the entire country as leaders in business and social life, the decline of the Republic is at hand, and its fall or overthrow dangerously close. Further, what must real lovers of their country think of the chief beneficiary of such corruption, our President, who, with a guilty knowledge of such conditions, receives the honors of the office, and its emoluments, without a blush?

Mr. Al. Reddick and family, of Scruggsville, visited his brother, James, of this place, last week.

We were extremely sorry to hear of the death of Mr. J. F. Gribbens, who lived here for a number of years. He was an honored citizen and a Christian. Your scribe offers his sympathy to the family in their bereavement.

If you need anything in the nursery line send in your orders by October 8 to W. O. Ellis, Mooresville, Ky., and he will attend to them for you.

Dr. Sam. C. Crume and family are visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Yates.

NEVER!
Perhaps Never!

The following paragraph is from our Long Run correspondent:

It is not often that one lives sixty-six years on the same farm and then sells out and goes 1,500 miles away to spend the remainder of his days. Yet this is what Mr. Harvey Lawson, who is now nearly eighty-three years old, expects to do. Only those who have had experience in this way can fully realize what a change of this nature means. Mr. Lawson has but one living child—a son—who recently came from Rockwell county, Texas, for his father, who expects to start on the long journey this week. All of his grandchildren and his two sons-in-law live in Rockwell county. So long has our old neighbor been our counsellor and friend that we hardly know what we shall do without him. As he turns his face toward the Lone Star State we can only say: Friend, farewell, and may the blessings of God rest on thy frail form!

There is more meaning in the above paragraph than appears upon the surface. In cold print it only means that an old man is going to move from Washington county, Kentucky, to Rockwell county, Texas. That doesn't amount to a great deal, does it? It will require but a little while for him to hurl himself, as it were, from his old Kentucky home, from his old friends and old haunts and old paths of sixty-six years treading—only a little while—only a little while going—but the coming—the coming back; when will that be? Not with the moons of November, not with the tides of Christmas, not with the harbingers of spring—not then. Not with the garnering of the harvest of another fall—never, perhaps never.

Needles, oil and supplies for all makes of machines at Taylor's, opposite The Sun office.

Dr. J. B. RoBards sold his fine harness stallion to Mr. Leonard Baker this week for $350.

If you have anything out of repair, don't forget G. B. Taylor, opposite The Sun office.

The books of Dr. Price W. Wells are in the office of W. E. Selecman for settlement. Call and settle.

Mr. E. Brown, of Willisburg, will open a general merchandise store at Wilmore, Jessamine county, about November 1.

Dan. Nance, an old colored man of this place, was adjudged of unsound mind in Judge Litsey's court last Saturday and ordered to the asylum.

STRAYED.—A thoroughbred Southdown buck strayed from my place, about three miles east of Texas. Information will be appreciated.
W. M. YOUNG.

The Children's Day of the Presbyterian church Sabbath School will be celebrated on next Sunday, beginning at 10:30. Rev. Latimer will deliver an address.

A protracted meeting will begin at the Pleasant Grove Presbyterian church the Second Sunday in October. Rev. W. T. Overstreet, the pastor, will be assisted by Rev. T. D. Latimer.

NOTICE.—Notice is hereby given that my son, Harvey Sea, has left my household, and all persons are warned not to sell him anything on my account, as I will not be responsible. This Sept. 25, 1905.
47pd. B. C. SEA.

The will of John F. Gribbens was probated in Judge Litsey's court last Monday. The will disposed of an estate valued at about $4,000. After providing for the payment of debts he gives his son, Oliver, $500 and personal property. The remainder goes to his wife, and after death the remainder, if any, will revert to the son.

Rev. J. A. Taylor, pastor of the Parkland Baptist church, Louisville, will commence a protracted meeting at Springfield on next Monday night. The evening meetings will begin at 7:30 and the morning meetings at 10 o'clock. Rev. Taylor is a very fine speaker, and will doubtless make the meetings profitable and entertaining.

An unusually large crowd attended County Court here Monday. Considerable stock was disposed of, much of it being bought by stockmen from other counties, though a great many mules exchanged hands among Washington county buyers. There were a large number of very fine animals on the market and they brought good prices. Mr. W. S. Gibbs, of Willisburg, was among the most extensive buyers.

Mr. H. P. McChord, who has had charge of the telephone exchange at Springfield for the past four years, has resigned. Mr. McChord has a number of good positions offered him, but has not yet decided what he will do. As manager of the telephone business at this place, Mr. McChord has been unusually successful, having taken charge of the exchange when there were only thirty-five boxes in town; there are now 107. The lines were kept in excellent condition, and he was recognized by the company as one of their most competent men. The people of Springfield regret very much that Mr. McChord and family are to leave.

The Postoffice Department at Washington has ordered that after September 30 all boxes on rural routes must be numbered. The following section, from instructions received from the department, is self-explanatory:

"4. The numbers assigned to boxes on EACH route will commence with 'No. 1,' which will pertain to the first regulation box reached by the carrier after leaving the starting point of his route, travelling in accordance with official description; box after box thereafter to be counted and given the proper number in regular sequence in order of service from 'No. 1' to and including all those boxes entitled to service located on the route."

Convention Called.

At a meeting of the Republican County Committee here Monday afternoon a mass meeting was called for next Saturday afternoon for the purpose of nominating candidates for county offices. The meeting will be held in the court house, and will be called to order at 2 p. m.

CONSTIPATION

is no respecter of age, and it is just as common a condition among children as it is with their parents.

The condition is far more likely to reach an acute stage, develop seriously with the little folks, because of the difficulty in detecting it.

Many a child has died from constipation, or illness arising from it, when it might have been saved by the timely use of

Dr. Caldwell's
(Laxative)
Syrup Pepsin

This is the greatest remedy known for correcting constipated conditions.

Don't wait until your child is affected, but administer a dose of the medicine occasionally.

You will notice a perceptible change for the better, a healthy color and a livelier disposition.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a good thing to have in the house, because it is good for the whole family.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can be obtained in both dollar and half-dollar sizes from all druggists.

Your money will be refunded if it does not benefit you.

LET SOMETHING GOOD BE SAID.

BY JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY.

When over the fair fame of friend or foe
The shadow of disgrace shall fall, instead
Of words of blame, or proof of thus and so,
Let something good be said.

Forget not that no fellow-being yet
May fall so low but love may lift his head;
Even the cheek of shame with tears is wet,
If something good be said.

No generous heart may vainly turn aside
In ways of sympathy; no soul so dead
But may awaken strong and glorified,
If something good be said.

And so I charge ye, by the thorny crown,
And by the cross on which the Savior bled,
And by your own souls' hope of fair renown,
Let something good be said!

Over-Sized Fowls.

The question as to the size of bird to keep is a more important one than most poultry breeders realize, and mistakes in this direction are only too frequent, one of the most common being that of breeding from oversized birds. Of all the tiresome inmates of the poultry yard a big, clumsy male bird is the worst, and he is sure to be a great disappointment, because a large number of eggs from his pen will be found unfertile. It is the sprightly, active, normal sized bird that is the good breeder, the sure getter of fertile eggs and, more than that, the begetter of the right kind of stock—chicks that thrive and grow well. There is another point—the big framed birds carry an undue amount of bone, which is waste, and such are less desirable in the market. Being coarse looking and rangy, they are passed by for the more compact birds which show a proper proportion of meat and bone. Then, again, these big boned and coarse birds eat more and lay less than the natural sized ones; therefore never try to breed oversized fowls, neither hens nor cocks. —London Mail.

HOW

Did This Tree Get So Far Beneath the Earth's Surface.

FINDS TREE DEEP IN BOG.

Historical Society Is Puzzled Over the Relic—Unearth Charcoal Also.

Vineland, N. J.—Former Postmaster Theodore A. Gardner, of South Vineland, presented the Historical society with part of a tree trunk found 45 feet below the surface of the ground in the Clayville clay pits.

Near by the tree was found an excellent quality of charcoal. How it got there is not known. The tree lay north and south, and was below a strata of clay, imbedded in a sea of black muck of the consistency of jelly.

Local geologists cannot tell whether the tree and charcoal were washed here from the north during the glacial period or were deposited by an upheaval of the sea thousands of years ago.

The wood of the tree was not petrified, as is often the case with samples found in muck nearer the surface.

Bones of Two Giants Found.

Two skeletons, each measuring more than seven feet in length, were discovered in a gravel pit in Forest, near Fond Du Lack, Wis. The skulls are as large as those of two ordinary persons, and the thigh bones are almost six inches longer than those of a six-foot man. The bones are in a good state of preservation. The skeletons are thought to be the remains of some prehistoric race.

A LITTLE TOO HIGH

For a Safe Jump In Case of Fire If They Build It.

WORLD'S HIGHEST HOTEL.

New York Syndicate Arranges for Forty-Story Building—Will Eclipse Everything.

New York.—A 40-story hotel will soon be constructed in Thirty-second street, west of Broadway, on the site of the old "House of All Nations." When this structure is completed it will be the highest hotel building in the world and one of the most magnificent.

The plans have so far progressed that bids for the work will be advertised for in a few days. The property is situated 175 feet west of Sixth avenue, at its juncture with Broadway, in Thirty-second street. Its ground dimensions are 125 feet width and 200 feet depth, running through to Thirty-first street. Borings show that the best of rock foundations can be found within 30 feet of the present surface and that a sky scraper unsurpassed anywhere on earth can be built with absolute safety.

There will be accommodations in the hotel for 2,200 patrons, which will make it the largest in the world in that respect. Five hundred single rooms with baths will be provided and in every suite of parlor, bedroom and bath will be a refrigerating box for wines and provisions. All the beds are to be of brass and the furniture will be of mahogany. Another novelty will be iced water for drinking purposes "laid on" in every room.

Cured of Lame Back After 15 Years of Suffering.

"I had been troubled with lame back for fifteen years, and I found a complete recovery in the use of Chamberlain's Pain Balm," says John G. Bisher, Gillam, Ind. This liniment is also without an equal for sprains and bruises. It is for sale by C. J. Haydon, druggist.

WASHINGTON COUNTY BUSINESS DIRECTORY

WHEN YOU WANT TO MAKE A PURCHASE, MAKE IT AT HOME; when you want to have a job of work done, have it done at home. If you go away from home to buy, or if you go away from home to have work done, nine times out of ten you hurt yourself worse than you do the home merchant or the home mechanic. At home the merchant knows you and will not misrepresent his goods to you; he has known you for years, he is your friend, he doesn't want to cheat you, he doesn't want your money for nothing. If you have ever bought anything from a mail-order house doubtless you can remember of having received different treatment. Their propositions look nice in print, but don't "come up." Pay your money "out" at home and it may "come back" again, but send it to one of the big mail order houses and it will buy 26-cent cigars for some millionaire in a European home. The Sun begs to call the attention of its subscribers to the following businesses, conducted in Springfield and Washington county by honest and honorable men. When you want to make a purchase look over this list and select your store. You will be tickled when you compare your purchase with that of the man who bought from the big mail-order house. TRY YOUR HOME MERCHANT FIRST; THAT WILL BE TREATING HIM FAIR.

The Friend Of the Stranger

A Memorial Day Story By HOWARD FIELDING

Copyright, 1905, by Charles W. Hooke

"THERE'S a young lady over there whom I know," said Graydon in a tone which indicated a very agreeable surprise. "I believe I'll run across and speak to her." He was upon the point of rising when his companion laid a restraining hand upon his arm and asked, "Where?"

"In the little whiz cart just by the end of the reviewing stand—white hat with a black plume. See her?"

"Yes," was the reply; "I see her. But I wouldn't go over there if I were you."

Graydon turned, with a puzzled look.

"Why not?" he asked.

"You'd better get some of the names of the dignitaries on the reviewing stand before the speechmaking begins. You won't have more than five or ten minutes."

"I guess you're right," said he, "I'd better stick to my job. What the deuce I should have done without your help I really don't know. I've no more notion about reporting an affair of this kind than your horse has. And now, Mr. Blake," he added, poising his pencil, "if you'll give me a few of those names you will earn once more the blessing of the stranger."

"How long have you been doing newspaper work?" asked Blake.

"Nearly two years. But I've never done any general reporting. I began to write book notices for the paper during my last year in college, and the editor offered me a regular job after graduation. I've done a few theaters, concerts, lectures and that sort of thing, and it seemed to me that a Memorial day celebration wouldn't offer any great difficulties, especially as I write shorthand and can get all I want of the speeches without bother. But in regard to incidents and people I'd have been all at sea if you hadn't picked me up at the depot. You see, I was never here before and don't know a soul"—

"It's queer that your city editor should have sent a stranger," remarked Blake. "Couldn't he get hold of some one who knew this town?"

"Everybody else was busy," replied Graydon, "and the city editor had a row with our regular correspondent here and fired him yesterday."

At this moment the girl in the automobile looked in their direction and made the smallest possible gesture of recognition.

"Upon my word!" grumbled Graydon, reaching into the bottom of the wagon to pick up his pencil, which he had dropped in his hurry to raise his hat. "She didn't recognize me. She bowed to you."

"I have the pleasure of a slight acquaintance," said Blake, with a gravity which struck Graydon as odd and even mysterious.

He was about to address a question to his companion, but Blake seemed to perceive his intention and to avoid the subject hastened to give the names of the dignitaries upon the reviewing stand. Graydon jotted down the names mechanically, but his mind was busy with another matter. Why did Blake use this peculiar tone in speaking of Miss Lorrimer? There was a vague suggestion in it that the young lady was hedged about by some peculiar misfortune.

"I met Miss Lorrimer at class day two years ago," said Graydon in the first pause, "and I've seen her half a dozen times since then at the houses of friends in Boston, but the last time was nearly a year ago. I've led the life of a galley slave of late, with my confounded work on the paper and a soul harrowing melodrama that I've been trying to write. I haven't been anywhere nor seen anybody. Do you know the gentleman who is with her?"

"I WOULDN'T GO OVER THERE."

"Her husband," said Blake. And, having spoken the words, he shut his lips together in a straight, hard line.

Graydon's notebook slid off his knee, but he did not stoop for it. He stared at the mass of people on the stand, and their murmur seemed to rise into an excited clamor.

"Who is he?" he asked. And he was amazed at the change in his voice.

"John C. Kirby," responded Blake, with the manner of a sullen and angry witness in court.

The sentiments of Blake in regard to this matter constituted a puzzle which might have interested Graydon powerfully except for the greater interest in his own. He might have interpreted one by the other and have reached the natural conclusion that Blake had been in love with Miss Lorrimer, perhaps without realizing it until too late. This was not quite his own situation, for there had been moments when the promptings of his own heart had been unmistakable.

That Blake could ever have hoped to win Miss Lorrimer's love seemed hardly probable, for he lacked the qualifications, so far as Graydon could judge, by so brief an acquaintance.

"I think I will go over and speak with Mrs. Kirby for a moment after the exercises," said Graydon.

"Don't do it," said Blake laconically.

"Is Kirby afflicted with jealousy?" asked Graydon, half in jest.

"Yes," was the grave response. "It's a mighty sad story."

At this moment there was a call to order, and the assemblage slowly grew quiet. With the aid of Blake's local knowledge Graydon was able to follow the preliminaries leading up to the oration of the day by General Philip Harwell.

There had been a rumor that the general would deal with up to date politics in a somewhat lively manner, and Graydon was fearful that important points would escape him because of his dense ignorance of political matters. But those who had started this rumor had maligned Harwell. He stuck to the theme and lessons of the day and made a really admirable address.

Just at the close of the address Blake touched Graydon's arm and directed his attention to the motor car, whose occupants the young man had been mercifully permitted to forget for a few minutes. Graydon was just in time to see Kirby reach across and take from her hand something that looked like a visiting card. He glanced at it and then glared like a dragon. Raising his head, his eyes met Graydon's, and the young man felt as if he had received a blow from a club.

"What's the matter with that old villain?" he whispered to Blake. "Is he crazy?"

"Something of the sort," was the answer. "It's a tragedy."

"But why—why in the world did she marry him?"

Blake shook his head.

"She is an orphan, as you know," said he; "she had no one to advise her."

"Advise her!" echoed Graydon. "That man's face is advice enough, I should think. Why the deuce does he glare at me so?"

"It's queer, and that's a fact," said Blake. "Can it be possible that one of her friends has recognized you and has sent that card to tell her that you are here? Some silly girl may have done it, and that would be enough to excite Kirby's jealousy."

Graydon was beginning to be angry.

"There's no reason why I should be afraid of him," said he. "I'm going over there by and by."

"To please yourself," said Blake gravely, "and to raise a trivial unpleasantness for her."

The obvious justice of this criticism affected Graydon for the moment and he devoted his attention to the proceedings. But there was a streak of obstinacy in his disposition and he held to his purpose.

"You'd better stick to me," said Blake when the speaking was done. "I'll drive you down to the depot, and you can put your stuff on the wire for Boston in time for the late afternoon editions of your paper."

"I'll be with you in three minutes," responded Graydon as he sprang from the wagon.

He made his way toward the automobile, and as he approached he was greeted with a frightful frown from Kirby, while the lady gave him a hasty nod and turned her face away. It was her manner which decided Graydon's course. He sadly acknowledged her salute and pressed on, making a circuit through the departing throng and returning to the point where his serviceable chance acquaintance awaited him.

During the ride to the depot he devoted himself wholly to business, setting his notes in order so that he could transcribe them more rapidly and adding various details suggested by his companion.

"You can sit in the wagon and write your stuff out," said Blake. "When you get a batch ready go in and file it with the operator. Then come back. Perhaps I can help you out as you go along."

"I can file my introduction and the names of the committees and notables now," said Graydon. "Then I'll come back and do the speeches."

As he entered the waiting room of the station on the way to the telegraph office he glanced through a window opposite and saw Mr. and Mrs. Kirby. Their heads were framed as in a picture. In a moment they vanished, one to the right and the other to the left.

Graydon ran across the room and went out upon the platform under the grimy, vaulted roof of the shed. Mrs. Kirby, alone, was walking slowly toward some seats where the usual human miscellany was waiting for trains. Graydon overtook her just as she was about to sit down.

"I beg your pardon," said he. "I"—

She turned, startled, and glanced at him and then beyond him in a manner most significant. Obviously she expected Mr. Kirby to appear at any moment.

"Mrs. Kirby," said he, "I couldn't go away without speaking one word"—

She stared at him blankly.

"Mrs. Kirby?" she repeated. "Who is Mrs. Kirby?"

"Why—why—you, of course," he stammered.

"I don't understand," said she. "But you mustn't stop to explain. My uncle is coming, and he will be very angry."

"Who—who is your uncle?"

"The gentleman who was with me."

"Is Mr. Kirby your uncle?"

"I don't know any Mr. Kirby. My uncle's name is Lorrimer—James Lorrimer. I have mentioned him to you."

"But what have I done to him?" gasped Graydon. "Why is he angry with me?"

"My goodness!" she replied, with spirit. "Why shouldn't he? You practically accused him of robbing the bank."

"I?"

"The story that you wrote in your paper about the Farmers' bank of this city simply made him furious."

"But I didn't write it," he protested. "I never even read it. I saw the headlines, but I didn't know there was anything in it about him."

"Mr. Stearns says you wrote it."

"Mr. Stearns? I don't know him."

"He is your paper's correspondent here, and he says"—

"He is a rascal! He probably wrote the story himself. He was fired from the paper yesterday. That's why I'm here today. I'll look Mr. Stearns up before I go back to Boston and gently reprove him"—

"But you were with him today. You were in a carriage with him at the unveiling of the monument, and he sent a card to us while General Harwell was speaking. He wrote on it, 'If you will promise not to make any use of the information before tomorrow I will tell you who wrote that bank story.' Uncle looked at him and gave his promise with a nod. Then Mr. Stearns pointed to you. And uncle was crazy, because if he hadn't promised he would have gone over and talked to you."

Graydon pressed his hand to his forehead.

"Let's think," said he. "Let's see what this means. That fellow met me here this morning. He introduced himself under the name of Blake and said he was on the press committee and would take care of me. I was very grateful, because I'm absolutely green about this business and hadn't an acquaintance in the city. He has stuck to me ever since and has given me points"—

"What kind of points?"

"The names of people and—and all that."

"Let me see some of them."

Graydon gave her a sheet of copy.

"You may know some of these," he said. "They're the ladies in charge of the singing"—

Miss Lorrimer glanced at the paper and burst into uncontrollable laughter.

"I happen to know them," she said as soon as she could speak, "because their names have been in the local paper here a great many times in the last few days. There has been a very amusing strike of the scrubwomen in Carrell & Co.'s dry goods store, and these"—she pointed to the sheet of copy—"these are the women."

Graydon was pale with rage.

"In another minute," he said hoarsely, "I should have telegraphed this awful nonsense to my paper. It would have cost me my job, and Mr. Stearns, alias Blake, would have been very neatly revenged upon our city editor who fired him. If I hadn't met you"—

"That was what Mr. Stearns was anxious to prevent," said she. "Of course I should have told you who he was, and that would have spoiled the plot."

"He was clever, very clever," said Graydon between his teeth. Then he suddenly extended his right hand, pointing.

Miss Lorrimer caught a glimpse of the face of Stearns, alias Blake, at the corner of the depot, and the next moment she was alone and anxiously awaiting the noise of combat.

Five minutes later Graydon returned, wrathful and disappointed.

"I missed him," he said. "He dodged me somehow." He glanced at the sheets of copy and the notebook which she had gathered up during his absence. "What in the world shall I do about this yarn?"

"It is sublimely ridiculous," said she, "so far as I can judge. There isn't a name that's right, and some of your facts are uniquely twisted. But I know most of the people, and we can fix it up together. Uncle will be here in a few minutes, and he'll help us."

"Uncle?"

"Oh, I'll engage to manage him," said she. "He has a hasty temper, but at heart he is the kindest of men."

"I don't much care what he is," said Graydon, with deep feeling, "so long as he's your uncle—only your uncle."

Something For Women Readers.

Cheerful Meals.

Family meals are of the greatest importance in the household and should be a scene of refreshment, rest and pleasant intercourse. Instead of that they are too often looked upon as simply the means of acquiring a certain amount of nourishment as quickly as possible. The result is that nourishment is not gained, because the food is eaten too hastily to properly digest.

The desirable state is regular meals, with plenty of cheerful, pleasant conversation. The state of mind has a very potent effect upon the digestion. Serious trouble is apt to take away one's appetite entirely. Worry will spoil the best of dinners. All should be as bright as possible at mealtimes. In the olden days jesters were kept at table to excite the merriment of the diners.

But to provide a background for a cheerful meal the table should be bright and pretty; the people who surround it should be tidily dressed. Children should be taught to always appear neat at the table out of respect to their parents.

The appearance of many people is all that could be desired for most of the day, but they are careless about breakfast. At that time they are only partly clothed, appearing in dressing gowns, with hair not properly dressed. This certainly shows lack of good breeding, and by rising a little earlier time could easily be found to dress completely.

Reading at mealtime is very bad. A book is very tempting to any one who has to eat a meal alone, but will hinder rather than aid digestion. It is always better to seek cheerful company than to tax mind and digestion at the same time.

A Rainy Day Closet.

A rainy day closet is a device invented purely and simply for the alleviation of the care of mothers.

In it are placed toys to be mended, games from which the interest has temporarily departed, pictures to be cut out and pasted in scrapbooks, specimens of rocks to be classified, a book of conundrums, one on familiar science from which easy experiments can be taken on trial, a charade book, story books, new and old and for all ages; crape paper for making flowers, sheets of old calendars from whose thirteen figures the game of numerical patience could be made, pictures of persons and places mounted on cardboard and intended specially for the convalescent ward in the children's hospital, sewing, knitting and crocheting materials, stamps to be pasted, materials for kite-making—in a word, anything.

A list of the articles and shelf where each is to be found is placed on the inside of the door, and a custodian, generally the oldest daughter, is appointed, who sees to it that the article chosen is delivered to the child choosing it. No one is allowed to ask for anything different for an hour, although the different articles may be exchanged during the hour from one child to another.

Motherhood.

It is popularly believed that women are instinctively maternal, says the World of Dress; that every girl baby brings into the world with her this lovely material for the making of a good mother. She ripens it on her doll; she pours the rich full effect of it on her first child. Nothing of the kind. Maternity is a craft. Poets may be born and not made, mothers—never. A baby demands something more than the seductive cluck which is common to slovenly old nurses. This popular idea of maternity is the most expensive fallacy we have, from the nation's point of view. Hundreds of brave soldiers and sailormen in embryo are laid untimely to rest—in such pathetically small coffins—just because in the poorer classes the girl mother's idea of devotion is to feed the new creature on "a little bit of everything she has herself."

Turkey-Raising.

The distinguishing feature in the different breeds of turkeys is in the color of the plumage and the size, writes a correspondent of American Cultivator. The bronze and the Narragansett are the larger varieties, the slate and the buff are next in size, and the white Holland and the black are the smaller birds.

Next to the bronze, the white Hollands are probably the most popular and are one of the hardiest and most profitable varieties to keep. Their beautiful, snowy white plumage, bright red neck and head and black beard on the breast give them a most striking appearance. The standard weight is less than for most other varieties, ranging from ten pounds for young birds to twenty-six pounds for old males, but the size is very satisfactory on the market, as it is not always the largest birds that command the best prices.

The Narragansetts, which are next to the bronze in size, have been perfected in the New England states, especially in Rhode Island and Connecticut. Their color is black underneath, with each feather ending in a point of steel gray edged with black. This gives a grayish cast to the entire plumage. As they are full breasted and have a proud and upright carriage, they make beautiful birds. They are strong and vigorous, the standard weight for the male being from twenty to thirty pounds and for the female from twelve to eighteen pounds.

The buff and slate varieties are not so common. In the buff the standard calls for a pure buff color throughout the entire plumage. The standard weight runs from eighteen to twenty-seven pounds for males and from twelve to eighteen for females. However, I believe that these extreme weights are seldom attained.

It would seem more appropriate if the slate turkey had been called blue, as the standard calls for a solid or ashy blue plumage throughout. The female is lighter colored than the male. The weights range from eighteen to twenty-seven pounds for males and twelve to eighteen for females.

The blacks are not as common as any of these other varieties and have been neglected for some years. However, interest in them has again been awakened, and they have become a very desirable variety. Many of our common flocks of turkeys resemble the blacks more than any other of the standard breeds.

Dry Feed For Chickens.

One of the best possible rations for a chick, whether reared under hen or in brooder, is what we call dry ration, writes a Pennsylvania farmer in American Cultivator. It is the nearest approach to the natural diet of a fowl possible to attain. This method calls for all dry food, such as rolled wheat and oats, small broken corn, rice or grain of any kind, small seeds and beef scraps mixed. To this should be added small grit of some kind. The beef scrap should be of good quality that has been properly prepared and nicely ground. This kind of food can be greatly improved by the addition of some well broken peas and beans and a little properly prepared clover. The peas, beans and clover furnish the vegetable and green food, the rest the grain seed and animal portion of their diet, giving them a most perfectly balanced ration. Should it be preferred to add to this a mixed food, it should be thoroughly scalded. If cooked or baked, so much the better, for this takes away the unnaturalness of the food, but little trouble from feeding is experienced when this method is followed.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy Aids Nature.

Medicines that aid nature are always most effectual. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy acts on this plan. It allays the cough, relieves the lungs, aids expectoration, opens the secretions, and aids nature in restoring the system to a healthy condition. Sold by C. J. Hay don, druggist.

Tired Nervous

When you feel languid, tired, nervous and irritable, your vitality is low—your supply of nerve energy exhausted, and your system running down for lack of power,

The organs of the body are working poorly, or not at all, and you are not getting the nourishment needed. This soon impoverishes the blood and instead of throwing off the impurities, distributes it all through the body. This brings disease and misery.

Feed the nerves with Dr. Miles' Nervine, a nerve food, a nerve medicine, that nourishes and strengthens the nerves, and see how quickly you will get strong and vigorous.

"My wife suffered with nervousness previous to a recent attack of typhoid fever, but after her recovery from the fever, she was much worse, and could hardly control herself being exceedingly nervous when the least excited. She was very restless at night, and never had a good night's rest. She also suffered much from nervous headache. Dr. Miles' Nervine was recommended by a friend. After the first three doses she had a good night's rest, and at the end of first week's treatment she was wonderfully improved. Continued use of Nervine has completed her entire cure."

ALWAYS BE TIDY.

There Is No Necessity For Going Around Like a Sloven.

There is no need to look untidy even if you are working about the house. You cannot be so cheerful nor so self respecting when you are carelessly dressed as when you are neat and presentable, and even the home worker who has no help with a little good management can be both.

If gloves are worn to do the dirty work in they can be drawn off at any moment and expose a pair of hands free from dirt. A clean cloth wound around the head when sweeping will prevent the hair from becoming dirty and dusty, and it can be easily removed in case of an unexpected visitor. A good plan for the home workers is to have a large overall to work in, which, when taken off, will display a neat dress, quite free from fluff and dust.

The home worker has a better opportunity of keeping her good looks than the business girl. She has nothing of the strain of traveling, in sometimes dirty cars and through smoky tunnels and often muddy or dusty streets. She can always depend on a properly prepared and cooked meal, while the business girl must put up with what she can get, but there is no reason why she should not pay attention to her dress, the keynote of which should be neatness, and she should be as tidy in appearance as it is possible for her to be.—Detroit News-Tribune.

ARE YOU TOO PLUMP?

Black Is the Thinnest Color a Stout Woman Can Wear.

White makes a woman look innocent, winsome and classic. Clear white is for the blond, cream white for the brunette. Is it not the woman in white who has all the attention and the wide eyed young thing in white with a blue ribbon who captures all the beaus?

Black suits the fair," a poet tells us. It is the thinnest color a stout woman can wear. Indeed, the woman who wears black to best advantage is she who is stout and has black eyes and black hair. It is well known that in gowns of certain colors flesh seems to shrink, in others to expand.

A subdued shade of blue, heliotrope and olive green with black, of course, are the colors under which flesh seems less ostentatious, while Wedgwood blue, pale gray and almost any shade of red are to be avoided. Mauve and the highest shades of green are the two colors that in decoration about the throat and shoulders are especially helpful in diminishing the effect of flesh.

HUMOR OF THE HOUR

Why the Tenor Was Fined.

The late Judge ("Biff") Hall of Chicago took great delight in telling the following story of "Punch" Wheeler:

Wheeler, at that time the advance agent of a minstrel company, had returned to New York before the close of the theatrical season, and a friend, meeting him on Broadway, asked him how he had found business.

"Very bad," said "Punch;" "so bad that the only way we could pay the members of the troupe was to fine them. It worked splendidly, too, and by the time we reached Texas the manager had squared up with the whole company excepting the first tenor, who was such a proper chap that there was no chance to find fault with his actions. At Galveston Mr. Tenor sang for his solo 'The Lighthouse by the Sea' and for an encore responded with 'Over the Hills to the Poorhouse.' That gave the boss the opportunity he was looking for, and he levied on the songster's salary for the entire amount—first, for telling the business we were playing to, and, second, for giving away the route of the show."—Judge.

Hit It Right.

Here is a curious bit of reasoning on the part of a little girl in a north country board school. The examiner wished to get the children to express moral reprobation of lazy people, and he led up to it by asking who were the persons who got all they could and did nothing in return.

For some time there was silence, but at last the little girl, who had obviously reasoned out the answer inductively from her own home experiences, exclaimed with a good deal of confidence, "Please, sir, it's the baby!"—London Tit-Bits.

And He Didn't Look It.

"George said he went to a Turkish bath last night and that's what kept him out late," remarked Mrs. Newlywed.

"I don't believe there is such a thing as a Turkish bath," replied her mother.

"You don't? Why?"

"Because I saw a Turk once."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Her Refusal.

Mr. Ardent—Darling, when you first refused me I felt like a drowning man.

Miss Chic—Yes. I noticed you came up three times.

How It Happened.

Tom—Do you see that pretty girl in the hammock?

Jack—Yes. What of her?

Tom—I saved her life last summer.

Jack—Indeed! At the seashore?

Tom—No, on the front porch. I proposed to her and she said she'd die if she had to marry me, so I excused her.—Detroit Tribune.

Beyond His Limit.

Percy—What did she say when you popped the question last night?

Harry—Why, she said for two pins she would marry me.

Percy—Why don't you give her two pins?

Harry—Because she meant diamond studded hatpins.—Columbus Dispatch.

Choir Chatter.

"Give us a tune," urged the music rack in the choir loft. "Be obliging. Even the bells play when they're tolled."

"No," growled the organ, in its deepest tones, "I'll be blowed if I do."—Baltimore News.

Making Payment.

"All I have in the world I owe to my wife," murmured the millionaire, who was about to fail, "and I guess I better square up with her right now."

And he proceeded to put all his possessions in his wife's name.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Life Course.

"Marriage," remarked the old gentleman, "is a great educator."

"Yes," replied the young wife. "Since my marriage I have taken two degrees—one as a cook and the other as a trained nurse."—Boston Transcript.

An Insinuation.

"Do you believe that man is made of dust, Mrs. Hasherly?" asked the frivolous boarder.

"Not all of them, Mr. Slowpay," replied the landlady. "Dust settles promptly."—Chicago News.

Not Equal.

"Do you think time is money?" said Bilfson.

"Can't be!" replied Bangs. "They say there's no end to time—and I'm broke!"—Detroit Free Press.

Regarding Phyllis.

She hath a dimple in her chin,
All bedged about with kisses,
And Cupid lies intrenched therein,
A wee sharpshooting mankin
Who very seldom misses.
—Philadelphia Press.

READ THIS.

Hopkinsville, Ky., June 7, 1901.—Dr. E. W. Hall, St. Louis, Mo.: Dear Sir—I have sold your Texas Wonder, Hall's Great Discovery, for the past three years, and from experience I can say I have never sold any kidney and bladder remedy of superior merits. Most respectfully, THOMAS D. ARMISTEAD.

A Texas Wonder.

One small bottle of the Texas Wonder, Hall's Great Discovery, cures all kidney and bladder troubles, removes gravel, cures diabetes, seminal emissions, weak and lame backs, rheumatism and all irregularities of the kidneys and bladder in both men and women, regulates bladder trouble in children. If not sold by your druggist, it will be sent by mail on receipt of $1. One small bottle is two months treatment and seldom fails to perfect a cure Dr. E. W. Hall, Sole Manufacturer, P. O. Box 629, St. Louis, Mo. Send for testimonial. Sold by all druggists

Might Be Worse.

Winks—What makes you look so blue?

Jinks—I have six daughters, none of them married, or likely to be.

Winks—And you are blue over it? You are the most ungrateful mortal that ever breathed. I have six daughters, all married, all have children, and I've got to support the whole crowd.—N. Y. Weekly.

Tired of Waiting.

Abner Slopoak (desperately) —M-may I name the day?

Jemima Jones (desisively)—No!

Abner Slopak (in alarm)—Why?

Jemima Jones (frankly)—Because, if you put it off as long as you did your proposal, we never will be married. I'll name the day myself."—Cleveland Leader.

What Turns the Tide.

"What turns the tides?" the maiden asked,
Her manner was so shy,
The youth looked at her bathing suit
Before he made reply.
At length he said: "What turns the tides
Is more than I can say;
But if they saw you coming I'm Quite sure they'd turn your way."
—Judge.

SUGGESTIVE.

Whitey—What are you looking so sad and grumpy about?

Black—Oh, every time I see a chicken it reminds me of ham and eggs!—Chicago News.

Finance.

Some people by investments win;
Of this there isn't any doubt.
You go and put your money in
And wonder who will take it out.
—Washington Star.

How Humorous.

They were showing us through the conservatory.

"This," said they, "is a specimen of the royal palm of India."

"Very interesting," we chortled, "and have you a specimen of the famous—"

Here we were compelled to chuckle at our own humor—

"The famous itching palm?"—Chicago Sun.

Cause and Effect.

"I dreamed I was at the North Pole."

"The room was too cold, probably. That sort of dream usually has such a cause. But here's one I can't explain. Last night I dreamed I was dead."

"The room was too hot, probably."—Cleveland Leader.

Shop-Worn.

"This," said the dealer in antique, "is a genuine Rembrandt."

"Indeed?" replied Mrs. Neuritch, with a critical glance at the painting. "What's it reduced to?"

"Reduced?"

"Of course. Don't you s'pose I kin see it's second-hand?"—Philadelphia Press.

THE NATION SUFFERS

MEN, WOMEN AND CHILDREN

Throughout the United States are suffering daily from Rheumatic troubles, Neuralgia, Catarrh, Skin troubles, Sore Muscles, Sore Feet and various forms of aches, swellings and inflammations. Are you one of them? If so I offer and guarantee instant relief if you will use the wonderful healing, external remedy, Paracamph, as I direct. Go to your druggist to-day and get a bottle of Paracamph, First Aid to the Injured. Apply it according to directions and if it fails to do what I claim for it, go back to your druggist and get your money. This is a fair proposition. Take advantage of it today. The reason Paracamph cures the troubles above mentioned is because when applied it opens the pores of the skin, penetrates directly to the interior cells, soothing the aching nerves, oiling the muscles, drawing out the fever, soreness and inflammation by inducing sweating. It cures in a safe and harmless way. Don't ruin your stomach and nervous system with strong internal medicines. Use Paracamph, the safe remedy. Don't hesitate; try Paracamph today. Sold only in 25c, 50c and $1.00 bottles at all good druggists. E. R. Spicer, General Manager. The Paracamph Company, Louisville Ky., U. S. A.

PUBLIC SALE
—OF—
Land AND Stock.

Wednesday, October 4, 1905.

In order to dissolve our partnership business, we will, on the above date, beginning at 9 o'clock, at our farm known as the Cocanougher farm, situated near Fenwick, offer for sale to the highest bidder, the following described land and stock:

LAND

Our farm known as the Cocanougher farm, situated 4 miles west of Mackville, and 7 miles east of Springfield, containing 440 acres This farm, with the exception of about 15 acres of good timber land, is in a high state of cultivation; all in grass, except 50 acres in corn. The farm has on it a good five-room house, tenement house, stock barn, tobacco barn—which will house 12 acres of tobacco—and all other necessary outbuildings. Farm is one half mile from schoolhouse, and three-fourths of a mile from store and postoffice. Has excellent fruit of all kinds. There is not a better watered farm in Washington county, having on it an everlasting spring and a never-failing well. About 100 acres of this land is extra good tobacco land. Farm is well fenced; in fact, the farm is well improved in every respect. At same time and place, we will also offer for sale another farm two miles west of Mackville, known as the Cal. Shewmaker farm. This farm contains 273 acres and is in good state of cultivation, 30 acres timber land, remainder in grass. This farm has on it a good two-story dwelling, good stock and tobacco barns—tobacco barn will house 8,000 pounds of tobacco. Farm is well watered and will make a desirable home. Good orchard; close to school. About 75 acres strong tobacco land.

STOCK

Six mules, 1 heavy work horse, 2 harness horses, 2 combined mares, 2 brood mares, 4 two year-old geldings, 2 yearling fillies, 3 suckling colts, 7 milch cows, 5 two-year-old heifers, 1 short two-year-old steer, 5 yearling steers, 4 calves, lot of brood sows.

Farm Implements, Etc.

Two 2-horse wagons, 1 binder, 1 mower, 1 rake, 1 two-horse drill, 4 large plows, 7 double shovels, 2 cultivators, 2 tobacco plows, 1 disc harrow, lot of harness, 35 stacks of hay, about 1,500 bu. corn, 100 bu. Northern seed wheat, lot of seed rye.

TERMS: The land will be sold for one-third cash, and the remainder due in 1, 2, 3 and 4 years. Bankable notes will be required of purchasers, and interest must be paid annually. On live stock, etc., all sums under $5, cash; over that amount, on a credit of six months with interest. Approved security required before removal of property. Notes payable at People's Deposit Bank, Springfield, Ky., bearing 6 per cent. interest.
